Blessed Among Us

St. Rosa Venerini – Founder, Venerini Sisters (1656-1728) Rose Venerini was born in Viterbo, Italy. Soon after entering a Dominican convent, her father's death forced her to leave to help care for her family. By the time she felt free to pursue her vocation, she had given up thoughts of cloistered religious life. Instead, she had found a new calling, offering religious instruction to young girls. With support from her bishop and the collaboration of several associates, she started the first public school for girls in Italy. She perceived that by expanding opportunities for girls and young women, she might make the most effective contribution to the economic and moral uplift of society.

Opposition arose, but it was quickly dissipated in the light of her success, and her schools spread to other cities. Though not recognized as a formal congregation until after her death, her so-called Religious Teachers became known as Venerini Sisters, operating under the motto, "Educate to liberate". In 1716 Pope Clements XI, along with several cardinals, made a personal visit to her school in Rome. After observing the instruction, he proclaimed: "Signora Rosa, with these schools you will sanctify Rome." Tirelessly, she spent the rest of her life traveling throughout Italy to establish more schools. She died on May 7, 1728, and was canonized in 2006.

"I feel so nailed to the Will of God that nothing else matters, neither death nor life. I want what He wants; I want to serve Him as much as pleases Him and No more.

-St. Rosa Venerini

SPIRITUAL REFLECTIONS

A Communion of Hearts

To love people as Jesus loves them is to wash their feet, to serve them in humility; it is to help them rise up in truth and love. Here Jesus is revealing something more; to love is to lay down one's life for others, to place their interests before our own. It is to give them life. That can mean accepting difficulties, danger and even death so that they may live and grow in love. To love is to live in communion with others, to transmit to them the life and love of Jesus. It is to reveal to them that they are loved, loved by Jesus. In this way we become their friend because we are a friend of Jesus. In this friendship nothing is hidden or secret. Jesus has shared everything he has heard from the father; all is given. The barriers that separated the finite from the Infinite, the temporal from the eternal, the human from the divine, have disappeared. At times it is necessary for us to live an austere life, like John the Baptizer, and to seek a certain separation for our bodies, to strain to reach God through our efforts. But God has appeared in the flesh, has become vulnerable in the flesh. He has come to offer us his friendship, to invite us to become his beloved. He has become little and vulnerable, To live a communion of hearts with us and to join him in giving life to others.
